President Wilson's Ovation in Omaha is but a reflection of the esteem in which he is held all over the United States. With the passage of time President Wilson is growing in the esteem of the American people. The Omaha meeting made up of people of all political and religious beliefs lauded President Wilson as the "man who has kept the country out of war," the "man who averted the railroad strike," the "man who has saved the nation."

These are no small compliments and it matters not that the "outs" may howl against the "ins." President Wilson has measured and is measuring up to the highest standards of manhood both as a private citizen and an official at the head of this great Republic. Having looked through the entire bloody scheme, Mr. Wilson has recognized the futility of the desire and ambition based upon vain glory. He has said and is saying to the people of the United States: "Enter war only when you are assured that it is the last resort and you are entirely convinced of the righteousness of your cause."

Having surveyed the great masses of the people of his sincerity, President Wilson's services for the country as a whole are of a highly outstanding character. He is not only a man of high ideals, great intellectuality and determination but an American with it all, one who knows no compromise with that which he believes to be right. This is the kind of man being offered by the Democratic party to succeed himself in the presidency of the United States.

To those who appreciate Woodrow Wilson, the demonstration in Omaha means a great deal. It shows that regardless of party lines the people have their eyes fastened on the man who is not only able but one who is at the same time willing to render them a constructive service. The vast throngs in Omaha declared that Mr. Wilson will be returned to the presidency and of this there cannot be the least doubt. The demonstration is the expression of Mr. Wilson's more absolute certainty. He is giving recognition to the people as a whole and does not center his attention on the classes. Of this fact there have been far too many demonstrations to admit of a question.

Anti-Prohibition Manuals for 1916 have just been issued by authority of the National Wholesale Liquor Dealers' Association of America, subtitled "A Summary of Costs and Expenses Incurred With Prohibition." The book is attractively printed, neatly bound and contains over a hundred pages of printed matter. In the introductory the people are admonished to read the book, to become familiar through study, with its contents and then act upon them.

The initial statement made in the publication is to the effect that National prohibition would cost the government $250,000,000 annually in revenue, but this is not the main reason for the open saloon as tribute to the National treasury. The next statement is that National prohibition would mean a loss in revenue of $21,000,000 to the various states of the United States, but it fails to tell of the excess of taxes, the creation of happiness and the maintenance of war, as well as the conservation of the money now wasted through the open saloon. Then comes a statement that the various countries of the United States would lose $1,000,000,000 in revenue as a result of National prohibition but there is not a word about empty income taxpayers, poor houses and paupers as a result of the removal of the hell-broth in which the Wholesale Liquor Dealers' Association of America deals to the detriment of its members. Attention is called to the fact that $32,000,000 would be lost to the municipalities of the United States should National prohibition prevail, but there is not a suggestion that the composition of society in those cities would be cleaned, their spots of shame wiped out and prosperity installed in the place of a glaring poverty and loss in the stead of sorrow.

Then comes the stunning (?) question: "Who will make up this revenue lost through National prohibition? What men will you have to pay?"

Thus are the souls of men and women, the fathers of boys and girls pitted against the American dollars right here in America. May not the counter proposition be considered? Who at present pays the revenues amounting to the exalted total of $17,000,000,000? Is it the National Wholesale Liquor Dealers' Association of America, or the people of America as a whole? What has the National Wholesale Liquor Dealers' Association of America produced? Poverty, crime, suffering, vice, ignorance, illness, loss and death in incalculable army and—what? The deathless Apostle Paul declared: "The love of money is the root of all evil." Are the officers and members of the National Wholesale Liquor Dealers' Association engaged in printing expensive manuals and sending them broadcast over the United States because they entertain a grand-sweeping sense of philanthropy? Is this being done because they love the United States to such extent that they are in mortal dread of a governmental bankruptcy if the liquor revenues are cut off? Is that which they produce and place upon the markets of the country a necessity to human life and happiness? No, ten thousand times no! It is a curse from which these dealers reap a rich harvest of finance and give back to the country a harvest of criminals, wretchedness and woe unmeasured—a potpourri of revenue dripping with the life blood of the manhood, womanhood and childhood of Free America!
